Motley Cow to bid adieu

An Iowa City staple, the Motley Cow Café, will close in June.

A classic Iowa City restaurant will close its doors on June 17. The Motley Cow Café, 160 N. Linn St., has operated in the North Side Marketplace for 18 years. The decision to close was made due to the owner’s desire to spend more time with his family. Peter Kessler, Motley Cow manager, said the restaurant’s community is a close one.

“We really are a neighborhood restaurant, fueled by people that live in Iowa City year-round, as when summer break happens and students go home, our business doesn’t necessarily drop off,” he said. “Our regulars all live in Iowa City, and we know their names, we know where they work, we know what’s going on in their lives.”

Motley Cow’s head chef David Wieseneck said, including his desire to spend more time with his family. In the North Side Marketplace for 18 years. The decision required to be a sole proprietor for a restaurant is pretty extreme,” Wieseneck said. “I wanted, while they were still young, to spend more time with them and have dinner around the table and such. I thought this was the only way to really do it.”

Wieseneck joined the Motley Cow in early 2000 as a chef and bought the restaurant in 2002. He said he believes the restaurant’s commitment to local ingredients was one key aspect that set the restaurant apart, as well as the customers.

“We have a core group of clientele who come here weekly if not more often, they’re people we know and have gotten to know very well and intimately, and they see this as a home away from home,” he said. “I think, ultimately, those bonds are what really set us apart and make this a special place.”

Wieseneck has owned Motley Cow for 15 years, and will close shop around June 17. He said it has been a formidable experience.

“Within the two years, said it has been a formidable experience. When life happens, we see this as a home away from home,” he said. “I think, ultimately, those bonds are what really set us apart and make this a special place.”

Riley McCarron

Two months ago, I didn’t think I would be writing this. But when Riley McCarron exploded with a 2 home run, 5 RBI, and 7 total runs scored at Iowa’s Pro Day, he caught me off guard. I didn’t see him play that fast last year, but he certainly caught me off guard.

Worker rights rallies mark May Day around world

By ISABELLA SENNO

IOWA CITY — Workers marched for May Day around the world Monday, demanding rights and better pay and working conditions.

Police detained 10 people in Istanbul as they tried to block a march of working people to the central square to join the gathering there. Among those detained was a leading labor rights activist, Nav odpaptoglu, who over the years has been arrested for unauthorizing a protest of government order. The march, which skirted Red Square, drew several hundred thousand people. Many carried red flags with the Soviet hammer and sickle, but there were also bouquets of flowers.

The Iowa softball team will head to Des Moines Wednesday night to try to defeat the only in-state team it has yet to knock off, Drake.

To do that, the Hawkeyes will have to file away the sour memory of a 11-1 beatdown at the hands of the Bulldogs earlier this season.

Iowa has defeated both Northern Iowa (4-2) and Iowa State (2-1) this season during midweek matchups, leaving the in-state trifecta one win away.

The Hawkeyes have enjoyed success in midweek games this season. The team is 5-2 in games that have fallen between Monday and Thursday, as well as winning its last five.

Originally, the matchup was set for April 4 in Des Moines, but after inclement weather postponed the game, both teams agreed to reschedule it.

It appears the gloomy weather that has hung over the state for the past week will move out for the game tonight.
